Why the Dream Home Profile™ will become Your Favorite Home Design Tool

Here's the truth ...

♥ Home really is where the Heart Is! ♥

Living large, living small. Traditional, Contemporary, Transitional, Eclectic, Shabby Chic, Mission Style, Island Style, Mountain Style – Your Style ... My Style. Oh, listen, that's only a few of the Design Styles to choose from these days. Once you've completed your Dream Home Profile™, you'll be able to design and furnish your home without worrying about style. Your Dream Home Profile™ will show you exactly what you need and want in a home that goes far beyond style limitations.

The Heart is intriguing; it simply won't rest until it finds (or creates) the perfect place to call Home. The Heart initiates our quest, leads us where we need to go, and lets us know when we find what we're looking for. My Dream Home began a long time ago, and was locked away in my Heart for decades. Although my Heart knew it was there, my Mind didn't. It took a long time before I discovered how to make Home the most welcoming and comforting place in "My World". And it took even longer to gain enough understanding to write about it.

Here's my Story ...

I have memories that begin around 3-4 years old – memories about my home, as well as a few special people and places. (Even though I can't remember anything before then, I believe my Heart began to store “micro-feelings” and images from the moment I was born – I suppose they were stored “sensually” rather than mentally. The truth is - these ideas, feelings, thoughts and images about Home are always being stored in our Hearts & Minds – not just “back then”.

Now we have a way to discover exactly the things that are most important about Home. Dream Home Profile™ reaches deep into our Hearts, and reveals the things we can do, and things we should buy for our Homes that will make them look and feel “just right”!

Here's a personal example about my Dream Home. When I was about 7 years old, I began noticing all of the flowers, plants and trees around my house and neighborhood. I loved to touch and smell the creamy white gardenias, violet blue irises, and blood-red roses that lived in our flowerbeds. I would walk barefoot all summer so that I could feel the soft, green St. Augustine grass on my bare feet. I would ride my bike up the street to this huge sycamore tree, and peel off the white bark so that I could write secret messages on the trunk for my friends. I would watch the yellow and black bumble bees buzzing around the fragrant green hedges, which were on my drive way, and try to pick the tiny pink flowers without getting stung. And, as each new season began, I would explore every inch of my yard, and all around my neighborhood, taking note of the different colors and textures inherent to each season.

I was a child of nature, and I always enjoyed the adventure and exploration of it. In addition to the outdoors, I loved everything about my childhood home, and I constantly examined it - inside and out. I always found a little treasure here, and a little one there. Nothing of significance, but I was a “treasure hunter” from the beginning.

Even today, I can visualize everything about my childhood home and neighborhood, as though I were there. Over the years, I noticed that I always gravitated to the outdoor colors of my childhood - earthy browns, ambers, purples, creams, and greens - with a touch of red scattered about. In fact, recently, I noticed that my favorite home furnishing store featured the same colors I loved as a child (Z Gallery). Consequently, this has become one of the few stores that consistently win my home furnishings dollars. What a coincidence! (No ... not a coincidence - their products simply represent the good feelings of home to me, and my Dream Home Profile™ has revealed why this is so.)

Many times, great discoveries are simply innovative solutions to “unsolvable” problems. Creating the Dream Home Profile™ was the solution to my problem. Over the years, I tried to recreate in my Home the feelings that I had as a child, but I could never get it right. Now, I know why. Rather than rely on just the memories of my childhood Home, I learned that I needed to fuse together all of my favorite memories and ideas about Home - those ideas and feelings from my past and present, as well as future dreams I have about my Dream Home. When I realized this, the concept of the Dream Home Profile™ was born.

I'm finally at a point in my life that my family and I are ready to create a home that is "perfectly beautiful" and "beautifully perfect". I'll get to use my Dream Home Profile™ as the "blueprint", and it will help me understand exactly what I need to do and buy for our Home, as well as inspire my plan of action.

[Editors Note: this story was written last year, but it's interesting to see the outcome] I can't wait to get started. In fact, my first purchase is going cost less than $150, but it will give me hours worth of pleasure. I'm going to buy an outdoor chaise, a small table, a small hibachi and a few plants so that I can spend the rest of the spring and all summer on my back porch.

[Editors Note: Here's a few pictures of our porch - just taken in August. Everything from my Dream Home Profile™ is there except the hibachi, which I'll get next spring. ] It's the place I LOVE to hang out - it has calmed me after many a stressful day, and also brought tremendous amount of inspiration; in fact, that's where I've written several of the Posts for my Blog.

Next year I'll plant some gardenia, English ivy, a tomato plant and a few herbs since this year was just too busy because of developing the Alie James Website.

To conclude this story, I'll simply say that my Dream Home Profile™ revealed to me exactly what I needed to do to make our Home feel "just like home". I used my Profile to help me budget for, and prioritize purchases for my Home. As you can see, knowing that my porch was the place I would be happiest resulted in a summer filled with peace and pleasure. Don't you think it's going to be exciting when you discover exactly what is stored in your Heart about Home? Make sure to purchase Dream Home Profile™ so that you can get started right away on your Dream Home! I know you'll love the journey, just as much as the destination.
